

Garrett Jones is a senior scholar and BB&T Professor for the Study of Capitalism at the Mercatus Center and an associate professor of economics at George Mason University. He specializes in macroeconomics, monetary economics, and how cognitive skills shape national prosperity.

Last year, Stanford University Press published his first book, Hive Mind: How Your Nation's IQ Matters So Much More Than Your Own, which Forbes described as "a model of non-fiction writing." James Flynn, one of the world's leading intelligence researchers, says, "For over 100 years, we've neglected the importance of national differences in our cognitive progress; this book is a welcome antidote and an eye opener."

Professor Jones has appeared on C-Span, CNBC, and Fox Business Network. He has written for the New York Times, the Atlantic, CNN.com, Fortune.com, and US News & World Report. He is an associate editor of the New Palgrave Dictionary of Economics and is on the editorial board of the Journal of Neuroscience, Psychology, and Economics.

Professor Jones previously served as economic policy adviser to Senator Orrin Hatch and as a staff economist to the Joint Economic Committee of the US Congress. While on Capitol Hill, he worked on tax and labor issues.

Jones received his BA in history from Brigham Young University, his MPA from Cornell, his MA in political science from the University of California at Berkeley, and his PhD in economics from the University of California at San Diego.
